A325-1, A490, Type 3, MG And HDG Structural Bolts

Structural bolts, which include heavy hex structural bolts, are designed for use in steel-to-steel structural connections, in a similar manner to TC bolts. These bolts are typically short with a thick, wide head, which contribute effective load distribution. Heavy hex head bolts are meant to be tightened to near their proof strength, allowing for significant bolt tension.

Structural Bolts That Meet With A325 And A490 Requirements

We carry A490 specific bolts and ASTM A325 structural bolts, which are quenched and temper heat-treated to exceed the minimum tensile strength required. These bolts are typically made from weathering steel materials like medium carbon alloy steel with additions of copper, chromium, and nickel, and are available with a hot dipped galvanized finish and mechanical galvanized finish that suits ASTM B695 specs. Our inventory includes a complete range of sizes.
